The visit yesterday was to the Kalibi receiving station, where complaints have been made of the accommodations furnished the sisters. The livery men agreed to furnish the equipages and wait for the legislature to repay them, unless funds are obtained from some other source.

The grand jury will make a final report this morning, giving a synopsis of the work done including the results of the constitutions.

"done"—as many of them expressed it —but did not object, as the big piles of gold and rolls of notes displayed by the winners lured them on to play. The men who made the "clean up" on the Buford are down on the lists of the transport as "casuals." They are not attached to any of the companies on the steamer and are simply odds and ends from many companies in the Philippines. They were assisted by a couple of the Buford's civilian passen-gers, who have spent most of their time and some of their money since arrival in Honolulu down around Wat-

The soldiers allege that these men make it a business of living on trans-ports and taking soldiers' money. It ports and taking soldlers' money. It is a mystery how they secure permits to travel on them. They go among the soldlers at the start of a voyage, say 'howdy do, old chap," to all and sundry, and within a few minutes can be found seated around a blanket on the floor of the mess room with a deck of cards and stacks of money in sight.

For the first few days of the voyage the amounts played for were small. For the first few days of the voyage the amounts played for were small. They gradually increased, and the display of big rolls of notes by the sharp winners gave many of the men an incentive to take a hand and try to get back some of it. But this was practically impossible. Every soldier who went against the lead-pipe cinch of the professionals lost. In some games as much as a thousand dollars would be won by one man. It was a continuous won by one man. It was a continuous affair. As fast as one man lost and dropped out of the game another man came forward to take his place. Sol-diers who won money in the smaller games among themselves took their
